Under this policy, Thaksin University encourages open and flexible learning opportunities for students from diverse groups, including those with limited financial or educational access. The university also enhances support systems for learners with special needs by providing accessible facilities, learning materials, and student services.

Beyond the campus, “TSU for All” strengthens the university’s role as a community learning center. Through research, academic service, and local development projects, the university works with communities to improve livelihoods, promote lifelong learning, and support sustainable social development. This approach aligns with the principle of “leaving no one behind” and directly supports global efforts to reduce inequality and expand quality education for all.

Ultimately, “TSU for All” emphasizes that Thaksin University is not only an educational institution, but also a driving force for fairness, opportunity, and sustainable development—ensuring that knowledge and innovation benefit every segment of society.
